- On 1 March 1953 the Nanning business office of the China People's Aviation Company (CPAC) was expanded into the Nanning Branch Company of the CPAC. After the expansion program had been completed the CPAC planned to open a new air route from Nanning to Paoshan (N 25-07, E 99-09) by way of K'unming. In early April 1953 CPAC personnel at Nanning and Paoshan fields were preparing for the opening of the new line. The Paoshan airfield, completed in December 1952, was ready for use in early April.
 - In early April the principal activity of the CPAC was cargo transport. The CPAC was flying planes regularly each Tuesday and Friday between Canton and K'unming, with a departure on each of the two days from one of the two cities.
